

Janis Cox

BIO SKETCH

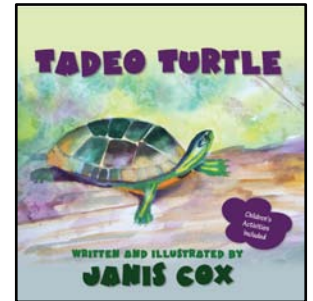

Janis is a wife, mother, grandmother, sister and friend. Her adult career has consisted of stay-at-home-mom, small business owner, public school teacher, painter, and writer. She also has tried pottery making and is currently relearning how to play the piano. She enjoys trying anything at least once (but maybe not bungee jumping!).

Her writing and painting careers started simultaneously and that meant dividing her time between two loves. In all of her pursuits, she has learned that practise, practise, practise is a good motto to follow.

Her love for Christ has set her feet a-dancing – literally – as she also takes tap dancing lessons. Janis is keen to tell everyone she can about the love, healing, grace, and mercy of God. For that reason for four summers she has travelled to Poland with International Messengers to spread His love to others.

Janis is passionate about prayer. She has taught Bible Studies on prayer and talks about how it is just as important to listen to God as to talk to Him. She blogs at Under the Cover of Prayer (underthecoverofprayer.wordpress.com). She is an avid believer about learning how to use God's money wisely and longs for others to recognize how "stuff" can become a distraction and idol in our lives. Janis has a blog (www.janiscox.com) where she writes about her life and how God speaks to her.

A former Martha type (Luke 10:38-42), Janis is learning that her Mary spirit is more important to God and His purposes than maintaining control of everything. She loves to spend time in the Word, reading, praying and simply listening to Him speak.
